ALF LANDON STUDIES ELECTION SILENTLY

He and Davey and Gov. Hoffman of Jersey in Cleveland for C. of C. Parley.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 6.—Alf M. Landon, governor of Kansas, who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican presidential candidate, studied yesterday's election results carefully but declined to make immediate comment today.

He and two other governors, Martin L. Davey of Ohio, and Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, were scheduled to speak tonight at the annual banquet of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce.

Landon recalled his boyhood days in Ohio, commented on Ohio state's football team and other topics, but he said he did not desire to discuss politics.

"Is this trip the beginning of a campaign for the presidential nomination?" he was asked.

"Not at all," replied Gov. Landon. "I'm just here to do a little visiting. I'm just coming back to my home state."

Before his arrival here Landon said one objective of his trip was to "sell Kansas." He said he planned to tell "how Kansas has striven to put her house in order for the next period of prosperity."

Landon was a guest at dinner last night of Congressman Chester C. Bolton, Republican of Ohio.

Members of the Ohio chamber from all parts of the state arrived for the opening of the 42nd annual meeting.

Col. C. O. Sherrill of Cincinnati, head of the Ohio government survey, will address the session Thursday. Arch D. Schultz, of the Ohio chamber, and Laurence H. Sloan, vice president of standard statistics, New York, will be other speakers.

You Get Such Fast Relief from Real BAYER ASPIRIN

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Aspirin in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom of the glass it has started to disintegrate.

What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

Quick Relief for Headaches, Neuritis, Rheumatic Pains

The old adage says, "what you see you believe." So the nurse, pictured above, shows you two actual photographs to prove the quick action of Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Look at them, and you will see one reason why Scientists rate BAYER ASPIRIN among the fastest agents, now known or ever known, for the relief of headaches, neuritis, neuralgia and rheumatic pains.

You'll see that a Bayer Aspirin tablet, dropped into a glass of water, starts to disintegrate, or dissolve, before it hits the bottom of the glass. Hence, it is ready to go to work almost instantly you take one. For what happens in that glass happens in your stomach when you take a BAYER ASPIRIN tablet. Relief comes in a few minutes.

Countless thousands know that about BAYER ASPIRIN. Know by experience that it brings the quick relief you want when in distress.

Keep this in mind the next time your work or play is handicapped by a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain. And ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name "BAYER ASPIRIN" when you buy. Learn for yourself how fast you can get relief.

Hard To Follow.

Gen. Johnson, "our favorite volcano," seems to have tipped a couple of white hot lava down the back of Charlie Michelson, the man who gained fame and fortune by "smearing" President Hoover.

Mr. Michelson, publicity director for the Democratic party, is showing signs of extreme agitation. Something in Gen. Johnson's bag of criticism has him jumping up and down.

In such cases, the thing to do is to fight fire with fire. So Mr. Michelson has just fired a few hundred words of hot stuff back at the general. A sample: Mr. Michelson congratulates Gen. Johnson "on the happy coincidence of his present day opinions with the Saturday Evening Post magazine's desire for such material." In politics, these are "fightin' words." There is no deeper insult than to charge a brother with commercialism.

But in his apparently frantic desire to convince the public Gen. Johnson's political beliefs are shaped by expediency. Mr. Michelson chooses one little excursion into criticism that is hard to follow. Gen. Johnson, says Mr. Michelson, is insincere in criticizing the Roosevelt administration for its "fiscal heresy" and "currency tinkering." Mr. Michelson remembers that a little over a year ago Gen. Johnson said Roosevelt dollars were sound as anything could be.

In other words, Mr. Michelson is trying to prove Gen. Johnson must be wrong now because he was right a year ago. Unfortunately, Mr. Michelson hasn't proved yet that Gen. Johnson knew what he was talking about a year ago. After all, it is possible for a man to have two opinions at different times, the first one right and the second wrong, the second right and the first wrong, or both wrong. It's difficult to see what Mr. Michelson's reasoning processes were in concluding Gen. Johnson must have been wrong the second time because he didn't say the same thing he said the first time. Maybe it's Mr. Michelson, the "smearing" specialist, who is suffering from insincerity.

Shaped Like a Wedge.

The department of justice's disclosure that criminals are attacking the constitutionality of the kidnapping and firearm registration act carries a suggestion of malice. Apparently, it is supposed to embarrass the constitutionalists.

The public has not suspected the federal government so far of capitalizing strong feeling against kidnapping and easy distribution of firearms for its own expansion at the expense of the state governments. The very fact the department of justice has taken the trouble to call attention to the efforts of a few criminal lawyers to get their clients out of jail by raising a constitutional issue suggests, however, the department's officials may be hammering a wedge into the Constitution.

Despite the kidnapping and firearm registration act, the federal government has not established its right to encroach upon the police authority of the states. Despite the fact the firearm registration act embodies the principle of the federal government's right to regulate articles in interstate commerce, there is no direct connection between that act and the national industrial recovery act, for instance. There is slight possibility the new dealers will be able to discredit the supreme court of the United States by making it appear the Constitution shelters criminals as well as conservatives, which seems to have been their idea of bringing up the matter in the first place.

Big Business.

The largest football crowd of the season gathered in Columbus last Saturday to watch the game between Ohio State and Notre Dame. The Columbus Chamber of Commerce could perform a valuable service by a study to show the big business proportions of such a spectacle—valuable, because the football reformers so frequently seem able to grow alarmed over evidence of a few hundred dollars spent in preparations for it.

Hotel rooms Friday and Saturday night in the state capital were in such demand they could not be obtained for any price. Lucky persons enjoyed the privilege of space at reported prices ranging up to a month's rent for a small house. Hotels are, however, merely one of the more obvious beneficiaries of the big business called football.

Restaurants benefit, too, though they do it through the volume of their business more than through price increases. Department stores and shops of all kinds expect to do more than an ordinary volume of business when the thousands assemble to witness a big game. The cash registers tinkle merrily and rapidly in service stations within a 100-mile radius of Columbus. Railroads find it possible to run special trains.

Property owners and renters with front yard space to sell get as much as 75 cents for a few square feet of parking privilege. Everybody dips into the bonanza for a share, from the university, itself, down to the bustling newsboy selling extras and the ticket scalper. Every transaction brings extra money into Columbus. When Cleveland, the city that hopes to become the convention center of the world, thinks about that big stadium down to the capital and the happy, free spending thousands who fill it completely at least one Saturday afternoon a year, it must grin in envy.

Defeatism Defeated.

Differences of opinion make horse races and election bets. Races aren't any less interesting because one horse happens to be favored in the betting, and elections aren't, either.

Sometimes, the outcome of an election can be predicted with almost absolute certainty before it is held. Such occasions are rare, however. There is no substitute for a popular vote. The fun isn't spoiled because there happens to be a favorite.

Between now and November, 1936, every person in the United States will form an opinion on the outcome of the national election. Some have formed opinions already, without knowing who the Republican candidate will be. They are taking a long chance.

Obviously, President Roosevelt is a heavy favorite. His party's strategists will make the most of that fact in order to keep as many wavering votes as possible on the Democratic side in the national election. Fortunately, there will be a difference of opinion over Mr. Roosevelt's ability to win.

That difference of opinion is a vital factor in politics. Without it, the philosophy of defeatism which politicians recommend to their opponents would destroy party government. All voters would climb on the favorite's bandwagon and political competition would cease to be.

Fortunately, there are millions of Americans who vote in accordance with their convictions, whether they expect to win or lose. Some of them, the Socialists, for instance, have never won in a national election and do not expect to win in the near future, yet they continue to vote for the party which comes closest to representing their beliefs.

In every national election after the World war, until 1932, Republicans were heavy favorites to win, yet millions of Democrats faithfully voted their convictions. In 1932 they won the election. In 1936, voters will do as they always have done—they will vote for what they believe to be right. Opinions and the odds for or against the contestants merely will strengthen their determination. Elections are decided on election day, not a year, months or weeks in advance.

In the Press.

The position of the United States with regard to the war between Italy and Ethiopia is not comfortable. This government's purpose is to maintain neutrality, not to punish either Italy or Ethiopia for waging war.

It cannot cooperate with the League of Nations, therefore, despite the obvious fact that failure to cooperate will rob the League's economic sanctions of some of their effectiveness. But neither can it refuse flatly to cooperate with the League of Nations, lest it appear to favor Italy unduly.

Consequently, Americans have heard officials of their government make declarations touching on the delicate question of trade with Italy which are difficult to understand. The difficulty, obviously, can be traced to the uncomfortable position which the United States occupies.

It could demonstrate its neutrality in two ways, by trading impartially with both nations, or by refusing to trade with either of them. The first way has been barred by the neutrality resolution adopted by congress last summer. Already, the United States has made it illegal to export certain articles to Italy. The government has leaned in the direction of cutting off Italian trade, but does not dare to take the last step. American business interests are not affected by embargoes as less eager to dole themselves to a negative neutrality than are the creators of that interesting theory. Thus, spokesmen for the government are advising cessation of trade with Italy and Ethiopia—but are not commanding it. Obviously, that would not be construed in Italy, for instance, as neutrality. The more the nation leans about neutrality and the problems thereto attached, the more it is plain that neutrality, like perpetual motion, is perfect only in theory, where friction isn't a factor.

O. O. McIntyre

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The newspaper crowd is mighty proud of the showing of a member of its gang, Ford Frick, as head man of the National league. His days as a Denver reporter are not far behind, yet he has shown an executive reasoning that surprises even his boosters.

Despite his years, he has proved he can display proper dignity and firmness as a glass-topped desk. Yet after sundown can take his porringer and eat supper with the boys. He has found out some rough places with the ease of a born diplomat.

His experience on the radio has resulted in some of the most neatly turned speeches ever heard at luncheon or dinner hereabouts. His exuberance might give the impression that life melts in his mouth like butter, but when he has had to face an issue he displays another side. Quite gritty.

He indulges the familiar digumariole, forming committees, listening to pleas, offering a timid word now and then. But when it comes to a showdown he is out there as a ring master, cracking the whip and adding perhaps a few last minute touches authentically Cavanish.

I dropped in to see the Cherry sisters at one of the restaurants depicting the Gay '90 mode not long ago. Years ago they became a symbol of the worst possible performance on the stage and there were legends they had to appear behind screens to protect them from hurled fruit. Now almost creaking with years, they were still on the receiving end for hoots and jeers. Somehow a wrench. Not the awfulness of their outdated act, but that humanity could be so derisive to such half-tone lives.

But there's a sadistic touch to almost every crowd watching the despair of failure. It even pops up when finished stars boot their lips at first night. In Cincinnati one Sunday matinee Elbert Hubbard began his first vaudeville engagement. He was facing an audience craving red noses and baggy pantaloons, comics, jugglers, cross-fire patter and such. His appearance suggested Lord Oxford at a levee shindig. And he surely opened his mouth when the house fomented the crudest demonstration I ever saw. And he had to walk off, crushed.

The toughest audiences in flush vaudeville days were not at the sea houses. The Palace and Hammerstein's—but at the uptown Colonial on Broadway "The 60's" now a movie. The gallery filled with hoodlums from Hell's Kitchen. Even such finished performers as Frank Tinney and George Jessel were hounded there. This one act always runs first at the Colonial was Maggie Glines, yowling, "Throw 'Em Down McCloskey." Jim and Bonnie Thornton were his favorites, too. But poor Harry Lauder. He could never make the grade there.

Morris Gest has again tossed his battered and fuzzy black Fedora in the producing ring. He has been ringing the Rialtos of Europe and picked up a play or so upon which his plus Alpine hopes. No one has mounded the upper slopes or descended the valleys of theatricals so dramatically. He is the embodiment of a transition period—the last of the old-time showmen who know every phase of the theater from selling sidewalk lemonade to taking a curtain bow for a first night triumph. And now wonders what!

Moniker maneuvers: Joe Santley and Ivy Sawyer, musical comedy team of happy memory, had an inspiration for the naming of the newest little stranger to their household. He has been christened Tom Sawyer Santley.

George Schenck tells the story of the rumbling mountaineer stumbling upon a group of surveyors pausing beside a shady spring for a midday lunch. Looking them over carefully he let go a spray of amber and drawl: "What you boys doin', mooning a little?" (Copyright, 1935, McNaught Syndicate)

Neighborhood History

TURNPIKE TOLLS

The Murlon & Waino Pike company was organized Sept. 12, 1868, under a charter with a capital of $50,000, to construct and operate a turnpike leading south from Marion. Its junction with the old Columbus and Sandusky turnpike was at Waldo, upon which it ran for one and one-quarter miles. The first officers were S. S. B. Mett, president, John F. Davis, secretary, and Benjamin Waddell, treasurer.

The company improved the road by ditching, grading and establishing toll-gates. The rates of the toll-gate, for every 10 miles, were as follows: a four-wheeled carriage drawn by one horse, 15 cents; for each additional animal with same, five cents; sleigh, five cents; sleigh and two horses, 10 cents; horse and rider, five cents; each head of horses in droves, three cents; each head of cattle six months old and upward, one cent; each head of sheep or hogs, 1/2 cent; stage coach or omnibus, 30 cents; two-wheeled carriage drawn by one horse, 10 cents; for such a vehicle drawn by two animals 20 cents. No toll was charged for those attending elections, funerals, church, musters, military duty, etc.

Behind The News In Washington and Wall Street

BY PAUL MALLON

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Sue Farley is supposed to have made a novel personal diagnosis of the political situation for President Roosevelt prior to the elections. His scouts are supposed to have reported that the country is against a considerable portion of the new deal, but not equally against Mr. Roosevelt.

That is, the Literary Digest preliminary trend poll may have been nearly accurate in sensing that the voters are roughly 3 to 2 against some parts of the new deal program. But the Farley contention is that Mr. Roosevelt's personal following is such that, if he had been running Tuesday against an one in particular, the national result would have been 3 to 2 in his favor. Specifically, the Farley boys expected to suffer losses in New York and Pennsylvania Tuesday but believed they could have carried the states if Mr. Roosevelt had been running.

In other words, the consulting official new deal inner viewpoint is that the country is now cynically in a duplex voting humor.

Mr. Hoover has not yet weakened to the demands (largely from his adversaries) that he get on the 1936 horse or get off.

Contrary to general reports, he will not make known his intentions in his speech here ten days hence. The speech will be in the general tone of his Oakland address recently. It will make specific indictments against the new deal on specific points.

All of which indicates that Mr. Hoover still knows how to obtain the widest possible advertisement for his viewpoint. His remarks will continue to be on the front page. If he ever renounces the G. O. P. leadership, you may look for him on the stock market page, or farther back.

Prompting
Best diplomatic authorities in this country have word that the British are sending two more military observers to Ethiopia. If you think they are going there merely for observation, you are too credulous to be running around loose.

Top military men have suspected that the excellent Ethiopian defense tactics from the start were conceived in British minds, although they have never been able to find evidence to prove it.

Financial cops
Dividends are buzzing among themselves already about taking advantage of Mr. Farley's duplex voting situation to stop the new deal at the next session of congress.

In fact, the word among them is that a sufficient number of Democratic congressmen have already agreed on such a course. They are to stand against any more $4,000,000,000 appropriations, extreme social legislation, etc. They are to halt the new deal in its present tracks.

The fact is a number of congressmen tried it last session, but were pushed into reluctant acceptance of most of the new deal recommendations. You may be certain that whatever understanding exists among them now is purely personal and unofficial.

Considerations
The influential Republican crowd here seems to like Col. Knox. He has attracted some important Republican party with men of national reputation and appears to have inspired them. What they are saying to each other is that he is energetic, strong-willed and sound. (This is not the democratic financial crowd, but the midwestern business authorities.)

For one very strong reason, they are not inclined to favor Gov. Landon of Kansas. They suspect him of being a prohibitionist.

No other Republicans seem to have been considered seriously, especially not Senator Borah.

Lines
A private survey of state election laws has been made by a well known Republican figure to show the feasibility of trying to organize a coalition ticket against the new deal. It indicates that the coalition ticket probably could not even get on the ballot in ten states. That means the end of the movement.

Also, the idea of nominating Col. Lindbergh has died a natural unelicted death. It is probable that someone here will start a movement for Baby Ruth next, but not much can be expected from either.

Political lines are getting back on the old double-track, Democrat and Republican system, where they were sure to go from the start.

BY JAMES MCULLIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—When the holding company bill was finally enacted last summer most utility leaders privately expected to register with the securities exchange commission when the time came. They figured— from the commission's attitude then—that they could expect a reasonably broad interpretation of Section Eleven (the death sentence substitute), so why not string along and see what would happen? This impression was strengthened at the first session between the commission and a group of utility chiefs. But in the last month there has been a subtle change in the power people's attitude and it now appears probable that very few of the spotlight companies will register.

This change traces to a newly awakened mistrust of the commission's intentions—which in turn derives from two recent developments: One is that Commissioner Matthews privately have expressed ideas about the interpretation of Section Eleven which virtually kill off hope that any big "holding group" would be permitted to survive no matter how provably free from abuses. Utility men are a bit puzzled that Landis and Matthews should have sounded off along this line when they are plainly so eager to ring up as many registrations as possible.

The second moil in the melanges is the government's attitude on the Baltimore test suit. All along the commission has insisted it welcomes a constitutional showdown. In the Baltimore case it has openly charged collusion between plaintiff and defendant to have the holding company act outlawed and complains it has had no opportunity to defend the law directly. Utility leaders insist this is absolute bunk. They claim that if the government really wants to stop the alleged collusion and get the kind of test it desires, it can be done easily to a suit whenever it cares to on five minutes' notice. Yet it has made no move to do so—and this makes them suspicious of the commission's sincerity.

Anti
Archie New York observers figure that Stanley Baldwin's recent urgent plea to the United States to join forces with the League of Nations was really for Canadian consumption. Mr. Baldwin is certainly aware there isn't the slightest chance that we will heed his appeal so he must have had some indirect motive.

The point is that England isn't at all reconciled to the growing trend in Canada toward closer relations with the United States. Now when we ignore his bid—he can tell the Canadians that the British Empire is unable to carry out its program for peace because Uncle Sam won't cooperate. Meanwhile an important section of the Canadian press is indulging in deft two-faced anti-American propaganda. Canadians are asked if they want to lie up with a nation where the largest element in the foreign-born population is Italian.

The Liberal victory at the Canadian polls which restored Mackenzie King as premier has been interpreted as favorable to America as against England. Insiders doubt that it will work out that way.

They remark that King is an experienced politician who knows the difference between platform promises and performance—and that he will find some way to avoid carrying out his respective plan. His following has little money. His job is to appease them without offending those who have much money. The latter are anti-American.

Dream
Well-posted sources say that leaders of conservative English thought have a plan in the back of their minds which would eventually convert the League of Nations into a Nordic group—with the United States and Germany replacing France. They feel that world peace would then be assured.

Of course they also figure that such a world organization would be dominated by Britain. Comment runs that this would be something for the British "ruling class"—which is gradually being edged out of its prerogatives at home by the Labor party—to look to in the future. It's at least an ambitious dream.

Candor
A New Yorker who owns a small suburban farm recently wrote to a government official to ask about his status under the potato law. The reply—on department of agriculture—stated flatly that this law would not be enforced.

Coming
On July 31 President Roosevelt signed the federal register act. It permits the government to run and sell a daily newspaper. Money will be granted soon for this purpose. Printing will start in January of February, according to New York sources.

While nothing in the act forecasts official comment, it is probable that there will be "official" statements printed from time to time. The paper will be on sale to the public.

Sidelights
Tammany abstained from an official welcome for prodigal Jimmy Walker in order to avoid playing into Jim Farley's hands. Canada's tariff war against Japan has hurt her more than it has the Japanese. Mining developments have been the most important factor in Canadian recovery.

CON'S ESTIMATE OF LINCOLN
S. S. Cox, pro-Union, though anti-war Democrat, set down this estimate of Abraham Lincoln in his book—"Three Decades of Federal Legislation." "It was almost a peculiarity of Mr. Lincoln that all his public and private utterances bear the impress of an honest, conscientious regard for what he believed to be right and wise—he was singularly free from partisan passion and animosity. It was a privilege of the writer to see him often while he was in possession of his great office and to hear him converse on public affairs. At no time did Mr. Lincoln utter harsh or unkind words in regard to political opponents or the insurgent South.

Mr. Lincoln could discard frivolity when confronted with a serious demand on his powers. He could always arise to the occasion—his little introductory speech at the Gettysburg cemetery dedication will outline the elaborate and eloquent oration delivered by Mr. Everett on the same occasion. In broad humanity and devotion to country, Abraham Lincoln stands the peer of the purest and greatest of men of whom history leaves a record.

"BLOSSOM TIME" TO BE AT PALACE THEATER NOV. 19

Reserved Seats for Well-Known Popular Musical Comedy Will Go on Sale Friday.

"Blossom Time," which doubtless has proved the most satisfactory to the most successful musical comedy of the present generation, will be at the Palace theater stage Tuesday night, Nov. 19.

Patrons will see the production in the following presentation in Cleveland and at least two weeks before it is presented in Columbus. The agent told George E. Packer, theater manager.

Reserved seats will go on sale Friday of this week, at a price of $2.00, $1.50, $1.00, $0.75, $0.50, $0.25, $0.10, $0.05, $0.02, $0.01, $0.00.

No musical play has enjoyed a year-after-year success of "Blossom Time," probably, critics believe, because of its story and its glorious music. Virtually all the music was taken from the songs and famous melodies from the compositions of one of the greatest song composers, Franz Schubert.

J. Charles Gilbert portrays the role of Schubert in the company which will be in Marion. Schubert himself is the chief character in the action, which is based on an episode at least partly authentic taken from a biographical sketch of the great composer shortly after his death and done into an opera by N. M. Willner and H. Reichel. Sigmund Romberg, the facile composer of "Maytime" and numerous other light musical works, adapted the Schubert music and other stirring numbers composed by H. Barto of Vienna.

A symphonic orchestra will accompany the production to add the needed touch to the unforgettable music of the soloists and choruses.

SNOWBALLS AT EQUATOR
East Africa's first snowball battle has just been recorded in Rombo, near Nairobi. The village is on the eastern slopes of Kilimanjaro and only 2000 feet above sea level. The first heavy fall of snow ever recorded at such a low altitude in Africa enabled hundreds of native children to engage in snow fight. At the same time a few miles away an old volcano started to smoke for the first time known.

KEEPS MINUTE TAB ON 1,300 PRISONERS

LEWISBURG, Pa. — Something like the "old woman who lived in a shoe," Capt. E. J. Lloyd has so many charges he always has plenty to do.

His responsibility is that of knowing at all hours of the day where on the 1,300-acre reservation of the federal Northeastern penitentiary each of the 1,300 convicts may be found.

Lloyd issues passes allowing inmates to go to various parts of the huge prison area for work or recreation. He checks his pass record four times a day by roll calls at many points on the grounds.

THEY ride with greater safety in the new Ford for 1936. It's not so much that V-8 engine power and pick-up whisk them clear of traffic tangles—although this, too, helps make the new Ford a safer as well as a more thrilling car to drive.

But it's mainly because every feature of the new Ford measures up to the standard of V-8 engine quality. The Ford Motor Company was not satisfied to put an engine from the luxury class in a car selling as low as $510. It insisted that everything else be in keeping with the fine-car quality beneath the hood—safety, as well as roominess and comfort.

Your neighborhood Ford dealer invites you to check critically and in detail the Ford's many luxury-class features.

warded with the honor of passing the water bucket and tin cup, the bad little girl had a permanent seat beside the teacher's desk.

Sometimes the angelic child felt sorry for her prankish sister and she'd start passing the water bucket at her sister's seat. When the bad little girl stood up to get her cup of water they'd switch places and no one would be the wiser till the lamp in the bad little girl got the upper hand and some one along the aisle was given a sound and thorough pinching. Then it was another spunking for the bad little girl and another gray hair for the poor teacher.

They had grand times when they were beating. If one got too many dimes the other stepped in and went off with the extra man he utterly unaware that the twins were having a grand joke at his "expense." In more ways than one

Attractive Picture

Unconsciously she made an attractive picture the other day. All in soft purple she was carrying in her arm a bunch of celery, the vivid yellow tops emerging from the paper and making a striking contrast.

Determined Manners

The child was the happy go-lucky type, bubbled by the entire family and made a fuss over by everyone. But her older brother and sister were praised for their lovely man-was something the parents hadn't been quite so fortunate in instilling in their youngest. Everywhere she heard what extraordinary manner her brother and sister possessed and while every one petted her no one complimented her on any unusual accomplishments. Suddenly out of a blue sky the other day she came downstairs and announced to the family that from now on she was going to have manners, just as good as anyone else's and believe it or not, the improvement has been marked already.

Wasted Efforts

Her boss sent her to the probate court to get some information that was an important part of some work that had to be finished by nightfall. She went to the court in the morning and copied the information.

Probate court Attaches were somewhat surprised to see the boss himself show up in the afternoon and ask for the same records his secretary had copied.

The curiosity easily was satisfied. The secretary had made part of her copy in shorthand and had been called away in the afternoon, before transcribing it, to attend a funeral, the boss explained.

Neither I nor anyone else in the office could make much out of the shorthand notes, he said.

The Red Cross Carries On

This is one of a series of 10 articles regarding the Red Cross and its work to be published in The Star preliminary to the annual call of the Marion County Red Cross chapter, set to start Armistice day, Nov. 11.

BY DAVID E. INGALLS
Chairman, Ohio Red Cross Committee

When the American Expeditionary Forces were demobilized in 1919 and 1920 many of the men seemed to be in normal health, but the rigors of that awful war were such that few men could brave them without feeling some ill effects sooner or later. So it was that as the months stretched into years many ex-service men began to develop organic disorders of one kind or another. Many were partially or wholly disabled for any active business pursuits.

Having been discharged from the army in supposed good health these men could not, without the greatest extra effort receive compensation from the government that was their due. It was in this instance that the Red Cross stepped in.

These poor men were totally unable to present their petitions to the Veterans' administration, but on appearing at Red Cross chapters they told their story and the Red Cross officials became their sponsors from that day on. Never stopping until compensation had been allotted to the veteran, the Red Cross would carry his case to Washington and stay with it until it had a hearing.

In many cases veterans are destitute when they make this last appeal to the Red Cross. Then the "Greatest Mother" takes care of them as she did in France. Direct relief in food, clothing and shelter is given to the man and his family until such a time as he can receive compensation from the government.

Many a sad conversation is hidden behind the closed doors of a Red Cross conference room, and voluminous are the praises of these ex-service men, who, when they were nearly ready to give up the unequal struggle, found the Red Cross and peace and happiness.

Moscow, Russia, is to have a library to house 1,000,000 books as a

TAILS AND BOW TIES ARE COMING BACK

Opera Season in Chicago Brings High Silk Hats and Evening Wraps.

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—Men are wearing high silk hats and women evening wraps this season as they haven't in years.

That it's a dress-up year was especially noticeable at the opening week of the Chicago Civic opera. It was apparent also at smart restaurants and supper clubs. Some evening lecture tickets read: "turban, phrase," and dinner jackets were the order at numerous home affairs.

Opening weeks at the opera have been more brilliant than in years, clothes more glamorous, fur wraps more plentiful and luxuriant. More jewels that haven't been seen in public, even at opera first nights, in years sparkled and gleamed. Even the balcony back-row ticket holders were dressing up.

The woman of fashion pays more attention to her hair. It has the appearance of being especially dressed up for the occasion. Being neatly cut and curled isn't enough. To be truly smart she wears ornaments in her hair.

Algreys have reappeared, and Mrs. Jacob Baur, socially prominent and Illinois national Republican committee woman, was among those at the opera with algreys in her hair. Diamond clips and coronets in their hair were worn by many, including Mrs. Edward L. Ryan, Jr., member of a steel manufacturing family.

Flowers are being worn extensively this season, especially purple orchids. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, at her lecture here had a large spray on the shoulder of her burgundy gown.

Science Explains Child's Cry for All Day Sucker

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—That childhood craving for all day suckers was explained today by science.

The explanation cleared Junior of the old charge that he was "having tantrums" when he cried for lollipops.

And it freed grandma of being termed "just fussy" when she scolded in disdain at her meals.

"Taste buds," not just for food, but for sugar, are located on the tongue, said Leslie B. Aray, Northwestern university anatomist, said in commenting on an article prepared for publication in the Anatomical Record.

The behavior of both is due to the fact that the "buds" which carry the sense of taste from the mouth to the nervous system decrease in number with age, the professor explained.

Junior's taste for all day suckers probably could be accounted for by existence of "buds" not only on his tongue but on his cheeks and sometimes even his tonsils, Prof. Aray said.

As children grow older, the "buds" disappear except on the tongue. And gradually they go, too, retreat until only a "y" shaped row is left on the borderline between the tongue proper and its root.

From a study of 58,297 "taste buds," Prof. Aray determined their averages for progressive age groups: Birth to 20 years of age, 328; 20 to 70 years, 258; 74 to 85 years, 101.

Prof. Aray said in elderly persons, all the buds often were atrophied, and the sense of taste gone.

Albright Tells How Rogers Was Unused To Theater

In connection with a nationwide campaign to raise funds to establish a memorial to Will Rogers, the star in publishing a series of articles coming from noted men who knew the famous humorist and philosopher. One of these articles appears below. With each article there appears a coupon which may be used in making contributions to the memorial fund. Contributions may be forwarded to the Marion county committee, of which Fred W. Warner is chairman, or to any in Marion county, each bank having been named a depository.

Will Rogers was unused to the ways of show business when he first appeared in New York with his act.

Bob Albright, vaudeville singer and native Oklahoman, told a story of Rogers' effort to get a raise from Arthur Hammerstein, for whom he was appearing.

Rogers had been held over for three successive weeks. His act was going over big. But Will was disappointed each week as he watched the remainder of the show move on to another theater.

"What's the matter with my act?" he queried. "Don't they think I'm good enough to go on with the rest of the show?"

Albright, an old trouper, instantly saw that his fellow statesman was new in show business.

"How long you been here?" he asked.

"Four weeks," said Rogers unhappily.

"If they held me over for only one week, they'd have to give me a raise," Albright advised.

That encouraged Rogers. He approached Hammerstein. "The people seem to like my little act," he told the impresario. "Don't you reckon you could pay me a little more money?"

"That's what every actor thinks," Hammerstein told him. "But how much do you think you ought to be?"

"Would $10 a week be too much?" Rogers replied.

"The story is true," Rogers said in later years, "but I've learned better since."

Not so very long ago Rogers received $50,000 for the first seven broadcasts for a nationally advertised product over a nationwide network.

Notwithstanding the fact that at the same time he borrowed $100,000 from a bank in Los Angeles to make a last payment on his ranch, he gave the $50,000 to charity—half to the Red Cross and half to the Salvation Army.

TO THE LOCAL COMMITTEE FOR MARION:
Wishing to have a part in perpetuating the memory of one of our most beloved and useful citizens, I enclose herewith my contribution of to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund. I understand that this gift will be added to others from Marion and will go without any deductions whatsoever to the National Fund to be expended, also without any deduction, as the Memorial Committee may determine.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman months ago I was going to marry Rob Crocker. Now I don't love him. This feeling I have for you is so different, I'd like to believe it would last forever. But how can I? How do I know? I'm not like you. I haven't been true to a dream, as you have. Oh, I liked you that night at the dance, I hoped I'd see you again. I even asked Duke Lansing to find you and bring you up, but you didn't come and Rob did."

"Forget it, Nikki. Let's sit here and talk. We've a lifetime ahead of us. I'll sail tomorrow and during the time I'm away I believe you'll learn to trust your own feelings. Somehow I believe we're destined for each other."

"You marry me, Nikki. I want to come back from the war and know I love you."

John talked and Anne listened. "It won't be easy being the wife of a fisherman, Nikki. I want you to understand that. Not that I intend to remain one always."

"What do you intend to do, and what did you major in, at college?"

"Political economy," he answered. "It's always appealed to me. My Irish side, I guess. But I believe there is going to be a need of statesmanship in this country. I believe there will be the need of men who can see both sides of the class struggle which is making itself felt these days."

"I'm an anti-radical as men are made, but I realize that unless leaders come out of the ranks, agitators will speak for them and the chance of welding the two factions into a harmonious whole will be lost."

"I want to be financially free to carry on this work. I've been asked to run for the legislature but I'm not ready to accept. I'm too young for one thing, and I'm not financially able for another. But with you to help me, Nikki—"

He looked down, and when he saw the tenderness in her eyes as she looked up, he waited for nothing more.

"Nikki," he whispered, "I know now what you're going to say when I come back from Alaska. I don't!"

"I think so, John," she agreed. She wondered if a ship coming in from storm ridden seas, knew the peace she found in the haven of his arms. And then breaking in to the charm of the moment came John's voice, low, calm—

"Nikki, hide there, behind that shelter, quick."

Like a shadow, Anne obeyed. She saw John walk towards the beach and stretch out in the sand, back to a log. A moment later she heard voices.

For a while she could not identify them, and then she looked out across the water. There was a fish trap there. The pilings to which the different sets of nets were hung, were old, weatherbeaten, some of them broken off at the water-line. The little shed which sat on its long legs at the mouth of the trap looked as if it were ready to collapse at the first wind storm.

For fully five minutes John waited, then nonchalantly stood up, brushed the sand from his clothes, and sauntered back towards the road. Once there, he motioned Anne to join him and hurried her back over the trail without pausing to explain.

When they were in view of the others he slackened his pace. "That's an old fish trap the government ordered abandoned some time ago. Evidently some tramps hiding out here."

"I thought traps were always set where the current carries the fresh water."

"There's a current there, some freak sends it into that cove. The trap there used to be one of the best on the river."

"But why were you afraid for me?" Anne persisted.

John smiled at her. "Must I remind you that you are very precious to me?"

The joined the others and a few moments later embarked upon a smooth sea, tinted with the last of sunset.

Anne, going up the steep flight of stairs to the grey shingled house she called home, smiled at John.

"See that window?" she asked, pointing to the one looking west. "I'll wait up there until I see your ship come home."

They stood for a moment in the darkness of the room. "And as soon as we sight land, I'll start looking up here, Nikki. And it's the last thing I'll look at when I put out to sea."

The next morning Anne stood at the window, watching a puff of little tug escort The Star of Lapland to the bar, then stand by as the sails unfolded to catch the brisk morning wind. Long she stood there, until the last fluttering pennant had merged with the horizon mist, and then she turned to pick up the threads of living, frayed by John's departure.

"I know I'm a girl, but even a girl has some brains."

Anne sat on a wharf piling, curls tucked under a seaman's cap, slim figure boyish in blue slacks and high dark blue sweater.

"But, Nikki," George was protesting, "girls don't fish... it's well it isn't nice, you know, what I mean, no girl wants to go around smelling like a fish market."

"I wouldn't be a very big market smell, George," she insisted, "I only weigh a hundred and twenty."

"And the men swear something awful, sometimes."

"But they swear in Finnish, so I wouldn't know but what they were reciting poetry."

"Yes, but you're learning the language fast."

"Wouldn't that be fun," said Anne hopefully, "I could learn to swear in Finnish and folks wouldn't know; oh, George, you've clinched it now; there are two or three persons I'd just love to practice on."

"But, Nikki, there's storms and fogs. It's dangerous being a fisherman." He paused and looked at the girl, who sat looking west, chin thrust forward and out.

"And we'd like to take care of you, I'll and me."

Anne smiled at him. "I know you would. And I'd love to have you take care of me, but I have reasons for wanting to do this. George, won't you trust me?"

"Sure," began George dubiously, "but, gee, I wish John was here."

"So do I," agreed Anne lightly and jumping up thrust out her hand. "Is it a bargain? Am I hired?"

"You know you would be," grinned the big fellow sheepishly.

But having agreed to take Anne aboard the NIKKI, as part of her crew, both George and Ovi set about making a fisherman of her.

At first, determined to cure her of her peculiar intentions, they gave her work that taxed her strength, duties which had sickened girls who had made holiday trips with them.

Anne said nothing. She stood duty at the winch until she thought her back would break and her arms pop out of their sockets. She learned to use a gaff without closing her eyes. She became acquainted with all the intricacies of the engine, and horrified little by returning from the drift one night as all smeared as any garage mechanic.

The fish were running; they poured into the Columbia. And the Sorki boys were happy. They would go a long way this summer toward paying off their debt. But there were others who were not contented, men who fished for the Farnsworth canneries.

Clouds gather, tomorrow, over the future.

The Stars Say—
For Thursday, Nov. 7.

JUDGING BY the lunar transit, this is to be a day of splendid opportunity for prosperity and happiness, with high favor with those in important positions and alluring adventures in the realm of romance. Those of increased fortune and enhanced prestige and popularity, but at the same time may encounter strife, opposition and jealousy in both business and purely private affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the even of excellent prospects for great advancement. Increased fortune and high popularity and prestige in both business and in private life, where a great romance seems to lure. But all this is likely to create hostility and jealousy.

A child born on this day may have a wide variety of talents and grace, with splendid opportunities for success and happiness, but its tendency to tempestuous, rash and impulsive indulgences should be disciplined in youth.

AGE IGNORED
MONGO, Ind.—Eugene Goodsell, 57-year-old farmer living near here, says his life is what you make it and that goes for age, too, insisting that he is not an old man despite his age. Goodsell went into a cornfield and cut 100 shocks of corn in one day to prove to his fellow farmers that he is still capable of doing a "fairly" good day's work.

Stomach stays settled after Crisco-fried foods

"Oh, Mrs. Tasker, you're deep-frying onion rings. I love them, but they always upset my stomach."

"I was the same way until I changed to Crisco. But Crisco is such a creamy, pure fat, that I digest fried foods easily now."

How Mrs. Tasker deep-fries CRISPY ONION RINGS with Crisco, the quick-digesting fat

Cut large onions across into slices about 1/4 inch thick. Separate slices into rings. Dip rings into milk, dredge with flour. Fry enough Crisco to fill ordinary deep fryer. Fry until it will brown an inch cube of bread in 30 seconds. (This is the best method for frying, because Crisco is the quick-digesting fat.) Fry onion rings until brown, drain on absorbent paper. Salt just before serving. Strain the Crisco through fine strainer into special can. Use this Crisco for frying over and over again. It will not make other foods taste "oily." It will not spoil quickly. Crisco keeps digestible!

PRESIDENTS TO PLAY STRONG WHIPPETS IN NIGHT TILT FRIDAY

Contest To Be Last N. C. O. Encounter of Season for Both Schools.

Harding High Presidents are in the midst of a series of rigorous practice drills in preparation for the game at Shelby, Friday night. Coach Carl Cramer, pleased with the showing his team made against the strong Ashland squad last Saturday when it held the Hilltoppers scoreless for nearly three quarters, is putting his men through a heavy practice schedule this week.

The Ashland Hilltoppers, with a string of impressive victories to their credit, played good football, took advantage of the breaks they received and won over the Presidents 13 to 6.

Shelby Team Strong
This week's game will be no easier. Shelby is now holding undisputed third place in the North Central Ohio conference with a 100 percent record. It has lost to Mansfield by the narrow margin of 19 to 12 and was also defeated by Ashland, 21 to 12.

In their two N. C. O. victories the Shelby players defeated Mt. Vernon, 13 to 7, and downed Galton, 21 to 6.

The game, which will be played under the lights at the W. W. Skiles athletic field, is the final N. C. O. contest for both teams. According to the present schedule, the game is the last one of the Shelby season, but Marion has one more game scheduled. The Presidents are to entertain the Bucyrus High team at the local Harding stadium the following week, in a non-conference game.

No Players Injured
All the Harding players were in good condition at the practice held in the stadium last night. Dave Leahy, whose illness kept him from playing against Ashland, Saturday, was practicing with the team yesterday. Duffy, hampered often this year by a series of injuries, seemed to be feeling fine as he participated in the strenuous workout.

Still more changes in the starting line-up for the Presidents may be made for Friday's contest. Shelby, in its game with Mansfield Saturday, set a winning stride for three quarters to fall under a Tiger barrage which netted 13 points in the final quarter.

The Shelby Whippets have played a total of eight games this season and have won five of them.

N. C. O. teams are participating in three other games scheduled to be played this week-end. The Mt. Vernon Yellow Jackets are to travel to Galton for the only league contest Saturday.

Ashland, with no game booked for this week-end, will entertain

FREQUENTLY, in recent years, one has noticed famous football names of a generation ago cropping up in the collegiate lineups and summaries with little "jr's" attached. The younger generation of Staggs, Wootter in a non-league game to be played Armistice day. The Mansfield High Tigers will be hosts to the strong Crimson team from Dover on Saturday.

Marion's final game of the 1935 season is booked for Nov. 16 when Bucyrus comes here to play at the Harding stadium.

Shelby's record thus far follows:

Shelby	13	Mt. Vernon	6
Shelby	25	Norwalk	0
Shelby	13	Shelby	0
Shelby	21	Galton	6
Shelby	8	Bucyrus	0
Shelby	13	Mt. Vernon	7
Ashland	21	Shelby	12

can look forward to better days for he has two sons coming along, and reports have it that the youngsters have the makings of real football players. Andy Kerr's son will soon be wearing the Colgate colors on the gridiron and doing what he can to put over his father's ball-passing trick.

There is a peculiar situation at Notre Dame. Coach Elmer Layden knows that his kid brother Mike is a fine ball carrier, but does not use him as often as he would like for fear of being accused of showing favoritism. Elmer leans over backward trying not to show Mike any preference with the result that they both suffer. Mike, because he is not getting the opportunity he deserves, and Elmer, because he deprives himself of the full benefit of brother Mike's powerful plunging and blocking.

There have been plenty of brother acts on the gridiron, even several instances where brother opposed brother, but here is a unique situation involving brothers.

Knag Boys Draw
The Susquehanna university eleven which recently invaded Bethlehem, Pa., and battled Moravian college to a 0-0 tie, is coached by Amos Alonzo Stagg, Jr. The Moravian team is directed by Paul Stagg.

Both are sons of Amos Alonzo Stagg, sr., who for over 40 years served as coach and athletic director at the University of Chicago, where his sons were students. The elder Stagg now is head coach at the College of the Pacific, Stockton, Cal.

Paul is doing a fine job at Moravian, where he succeeded Glenn Killinger, former Penn State star. Moravian scored a big upset when it downed Lafayette 6-0 in the first game of its season.

CORN BELT GRIDDERS TOP ALL OTHERS IN INTERSECTIONAL WINS

Roll Up 19 Victories Against Nine Defeats for Average of .679 This Season.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Intersectional records indicate the epicenter of America's football earthquake is in the middle west. First class teams are found in every section, but as a group those in the corn belt have piled up the most amazing record against representatives of other regions.

The Big Ten, Notre Dame, Michigan State, Marquette and other midwestern powers have rolled up 19 victories in intersectional combat against nine defeats for an average of .679. Big Ten members have won eight games of this classification against only one defeat, Purdue's startling 7-0 reversal at the hands of Carnegie.

Pacific Coast Record
The Pacific coast ranks second in intersectional averages with two victories and one defeat, but the only major intersectional game a coast conference team has played resulted in Southern California's 19-0 setback by Illinois. The two victories were scored over teams from the neighboring Rocky Mountain conference.

Its record of six victories and four defeats falls to show the real power lodged in the Southwest conference. The co-leaders, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, have played only one intersectional game between them. Christian beating Centenary 27-7. It was the worst defeat a Centenary team has taken at home in years.

Florida's Owls have carried most of the southwest's burden in other fields. Starting off with a 10-7 conquest of Louisiana State—the only game LSU has lost—the Owls followed through with a 27-7 triumph over Duquesne and a 41-0 lacing of George Washington.

South, East Weak
Neither the South nor the East can point with much pride to their intersectional accomplishments. The South has won 11 and lost 14 major engagements of this kind; the East 12 and 18.

The South's principal successes were achieved by Mississippi State and Tulane—the former by its upset of Army, 13-7, and Tulane by its 14-6 victory over Colgate. Louisiana State took turns walloping Manhattan, a team good enough to the Holy Cross, which ranks as one of the eastern leaders.

The East can find some comfort in Carnegie's great performance against Purdue and in Boston college's even more startling upset of Michigan State, a team otherwise unbeaten.

Michigan's victories over Columbia and Penn on successive week-ends give the Wolverines top position in the Big Ten's intersectional table. Minnesota, Purdue, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio State and

Northwestern Coach To Notre Dame Coach

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Nov. 6—While Elmer Layden, whose Notre Dame football miracle makers figure to go marching on toward an undefeated season Saturday, worries and weathers at the expense of Northwestern, Coach Lynn Waldorf of the Wildcats, in a frame of mind verging on optimism, Layden has plenty of honest-to-goodness worries. Andy Pilney, quarterback in Notre Dame's flaming comeback against Ohio State Saturday, will not be present against Northwestern and may not play in another game for the Irish. Fred Carideo, Layden's number one fullback, and Dick Pfeiffer, the only experienced left tackle on the squad, also will be missing because of leg injuries.

Layden fears his squad may dwell too much upon what happened last week, and not enough on the business at hand. They may not take the improving Wildcats seriously enough to avoid an upset beating. But, Notre Dame will be a full-sized favorite just the same.

Pfeiffer's injury came as a shock to Layden, for the tackle stayed in there against the Buck-Iowa have helped, numbering such teams as Tulane, Colgate, Fordham and Kentucky among the victims.

Slow Whistle Rule Is Source of Complaints in Grid Officiating

Delay To Give Players Opportunity To Make Possible Lateral Passes Makes Trouble for Officials.

By International News Service Something's going to have to be done about football officiating Ohio.
What that something is hasn't been determined by the powers that be in college and high school groups.
Most of the blame for the outbursts over officiating is chargeable to the "slow whistle" rule in the rules, the one in which officials are to delay slightly in declaring the ball dead in order to allow lateral passes after the ball carrier's forward progress has been stopped. This "slow whistle" is blamed for the scenes on gridirons in all sections in which coaches have jumped from the bench to protest decisions and for the verbal beatings officials have taken between halves and after games.

It is this same rule which is being blamed for the epidemic of shoulder injuries that has hit backfield men, particularly those in college. Because of slowness in declaring the ball dead, runners are often crushed to the ground by weight of numbers, with consequent injury.

L. C. Boles, dean of Ohio conference coaches, is strong in denunciation of this rule, which he terms the "worst ever made by the rules committee." He contends that in catering to the wishes of the fans the rules committee is "forgetting the welfare of the boys themselves."

Not all of the blame for the officiating situation is charged against the "slow whistle." Coaches claim that officials are doing too much watching the ball and not paying enough attention to conduct of players. The result is that officials are blamed for missing holding in line play, clipping, and other offenses.

Officials point out that with the possibility of a lateral pass popping out at any moment, and it being highly important whether it goes forward or backward, somebody has to watch the ball and that adds to the burden of the umpire and head linesman and does, of necessity, take some of their attention from that section of the play in which they should be concerned primarily.

The officiating situation is particularly disturbing to the Ohio
High School Athletic association.
The scholastic body took steps to increase the efficiency of officiating, but so far no noticeable improvement has been seen. The state association made registration of officials compulsory, with no one permitted to break into the business without passing an examination.

It is significant that in spite of all the heated talk, there have been no claims that officials have been acted by any desire to render a wrong decision.

NEW HUNT STARTED
FOR PIRATE'S GOLD

By United Press
AMHERST, N. S.—Another attempt to locate Captain Kidd's $10,000,000 treasure chest, reputedly buried on Oak Island, Nova Scotia's famous "treasure island," may be made soon.

It is reported that an American syndicate is being formed to purchase mining rights of the island from Fred Blair, who has held them since 1909, and spent about $100,000 searching for the famous pirate's treasure, supposedly buried deep in the soil of the oakfringed island in Mahone Bay.

Scores of expeditions have attempted to find the legendary treasure during the last half-century. One expedition actually brought up flakes of gold and a piece of gold chain on the end of a drill, but water flooded the shaft before they could go deeper, and they gave up the attempt.

Engineers who have surveyed the island believe the treasure, if it exists, is buried in a cunningly contrived tunnel below the water level which the pirates built to flood the "money hole." They have found several subterranean passages on the island, but no trace of treasure.

Edwin F. Miller, former principal of Youngstown Rayen High school, will not be forced to remain away from Rayen athletic contests because he hasn't a ticket. Miller was presented recently with a pass good until Jan. 1, 1936.
